

I can promise
you

If it takes a thousand drawings

To captivate
the attention of

So I thoughtfully responded

And by "Derp" I meant to say
"I'm sorry, I can't shake your hands, saying "Thank you for my new house"
at the moment,

However,

WEB
TOON

LINE WEBTOON

and say "thanks to you I got my mom a new house."

But y'know...
since I'm a Snail...that'll be like...in 10
years or something.

one reader

One Day

Casualty/
shamelessly
selling with merchandises
lolz

One day,
we'll be
there too.

Kreyul
My OC from Nightmare
Factory

Then one thousand and one drawings I will send.

I won't stop until
I am where I want to be.

One day, I will shake your hands
and say "Thanks to you, I got my

During my visit to Webtoon headquarter in Seoul, Korea.

I saw a table of merchondises from popular webtoons in Korea like Girls of the Wild, Smile Brush, Noblesse, etc.

Webtoons/
webloons
in Korea is the equvalence of manga in Japan

In another word,
popular/
prevalence
as hell

Which David (one of Webtoon editors) translated to

My favorite thing
to hear is when creators came up
to me and say

"Oh-thanks to you,
I got a new BMW"
or "—a new house."

"ok, for I don't know if that's exactly what Jungu did. I

So far now, all I can say is "Gamsahapnida for this trip to Korea and giving me a glimpse of what my future could be like."

SNAILORDS

Gamsahapnida: Thank you
Oro: A Japanese expression of confusion.

Thank you Emily and David for showing me around & feeding me.
Thank you Liz and MJ for meeting me!
It was really nice to see everyone.

Takk for al du leser Snailogy!

I met Emily, David, Liz and MJ (Webtoon editors/staff) along with Junko, the Founder of Webtoons website, the man revolutionizing the way comics are consumed in Korea by popularizing them on the web. Yet still insists his team refers to him as "bro" instead of the equivalence of boss lol.

Anyways, the successful Otoku mentioned

